Der damalige Filmakademiestudent Bas Labruyère erlitt während des Studiums eine erste Psychose und drehte danach den Film "Lost Years". Dieser ist ein eindrückliches Dokument darüber, was es heisst, durch eine Psychose aus dem gewohnten Leben gerissen zu werden. Der Film ist ein autobiographisches Werk, das einen Einblick in die subjektive Dimension eines jungen Menschen mit einer ersten Psychose erlaubt.

Der Filmer Bas Labruyère ist während der Vorführung anwesend und steht am Ende für eine kurze Diskussion zur Verfügung. Gerne lade ich Sie zu diesem aussergewöhnlichen Lunchseminar ein.

Filmemacher und Patient

I am Bas Labruyère, now 43 years old. When I studied the study direction fiction at the film academy in Amsterdam, I had to deal with psychotic phenomena that lasted together for three to five years (2003 – 2008). Because of this I had to interrupt my study and eventually did not finish it. During this period of my life I made the film "Lost Years". After the premiere of the film, I started showing and discussing the film with organizations for Mental Healthcare, schools and universities and at countless symposia, conferences and festivals. By 2016 I did this more than 250 times and felt it was time for something else. I had been free of psychotic symptoms for eight years and had been without medication for six years. Over the years, I dared to dream again and those dreams seemed to be within reach. I started making small assignment videos about psychiatry related topics and designing some websites and wanted to continue that positive line and focus on my passion, making films. Unfortunately, in spring of 2016, fate struck me again in the same way as my long-term psychosis during my studies at the film academy. The psychotic episode again undermined all autonomy. The theme of my psychosis was the same and it was as if 'they' wanted to make it clear to me it was not a psychosis, but something else was going on. Synchronously with this 'psychosis', almost everything I had built up was gradually destroyed in all areas of life. The weather is improving, even though I am still stuck with the consequences. I try to pick up my life, making video productions and websites, and giving lectures again. In addition, after this 'psychosis' I have many renewed, in-depth insights about the psychosis the film "Lost Years" is about. I have decided to produce a sequel of the film for which I am currently preparing and funding.
